

Beltsville Man Named One of Top 50 Graduates

John W. Anna, Jr. of Beltsville has been honored as one of the 50 most prominent graduates of Prince George's Community College over the past 50 years. At the induction ceremony held October 8, 2008 at the college, Mr. Anna's likeness and bio were unveiled on a panel that encircles the interior of the newly renovated Bladen Hall, along with the other 49 honorees.

Through his "professional endeavors, academic accomplishments, community service, philanthropy and personal triumphs, Mr. Anna has clearly demonstrated why, of the over 500,000 individuals who have graduated from Prince George's Community College, this honor has been bestowed upon him. Over the years, Mr. Anna has consistently sponsored such events as the Police National Night Out for District VI and the Laurel Police Department, the Maryland Special Olympics, and numerous sports and athletic clubs, to mention but a few. In addition, Mr. Anna has donated a new computer-learning center to Faith

Baptist Christian School and has sponsored the "Anna Audio Visual Center" in the new wing of Pallotti High School, to which he donated over $100,000.

Mr. Anna resides in Beltsville with his wife Felicia and their four children and is the owner of Adirondack Tree Experts, one of the top rated tree care and removal companies in the Washington metropolitan area. As a private pilot, Mr. Anna enjoys flying and scuba diving in his free time.
